Conflict-Of-Interest Law

The touchy and ill-defined subject of conflict of interest by legislators has been opened for discussion in the special session of the Ohio General Assembly.

Sens. Ed Witmer, D-Canton, and Charles Jones, R-Hamilton, are asking their colleagues to sharpen the law regarding legislative service by employes of universities receiving state support. Their proposal would permit these people to serve in both capacities.

An issue arose when Clevelanders charged that Rep. Robert H. Longsworth, R-Carroll, and Sen. Robert Stockdale, R-Kent, both on the payroll of Kent State University, might be prejudiced when voting on a bill to create a state university at Cleveland.

It's possible they might have been prejudiced, and maybe they still are, even though they have been dropped from KSU's payroll while the legislature is in

BUT WE DOUBT that they harbor any stronger prejudices about the new state university than any other public school teacher, whose legislative service is unquestioned by law, might hold about a tax increase for teacher salaries.

Some positions are clearly incompatible. Persons holding other elective public offices are and should be barred from serving in the Legislature. Township officers, for some reason, are exempt.

College professors and other university employes can make an important contribution to the General Assembly. It seems absurd to question their right to serve in both capacities when Ohio law is so loose in defining other areas of conflicting interest.

Attorneys serve as legislators, though there are times in every lawyerlegislator's career when he must vote on a bill affecting a client. And can a merchant vote without prejudice on a Sunday closing law? Can any member of the legislature vote without prejudice on any bill that would affect the way he makes his living?

THE REMEDY for potential conflict of interest doesn't lie in barring able citizens from legislative service. The Legislature is too short on talent as it is.

Maybe we should let the matter rest with the conscience of legislators and hope that until someone dreams up a law that will regulate conscience individual integrity will triumph.

Put On The Brakes

As quite often is the case after a weekend, accidents and arrests for violation of traffic regulations dotted the pages of Monday's Review.

And with winter coming on, the outlook becomes even more foreboding. If mishaps and violations occur by the dozens now, it stands to reason that things will get worse as bad weather moves in.

And there's the approaching holiday season, this month and next, to add to the problem, with cars jamming the

Japan Sees The Sea Dragon

As time ticks on and everybody learns to know the Japanese better, admiration for their sterling qualities increases.

Among the things they do well is student demonstrations like the demonstrations last week against the U.S. nuclearpowered submarine Seadragon. Everything went like clockwork. Thousands turned out and put on a first-class riot.

The Seadragon carries no nuclear weapons. Its mission was friendly. But it contains a nuclear power plant, which is the only excuse needed for a student demonstration. It is doubtful if there was even a mental connection in the demonstrators' minds between nuclear propulsion and the nuclear explosions that jarred imperial Japan out of its military madness.

There wouldn't have to be a connection. The presence of anything American is enough to trigger a student demonstration in Japan, Britain, Italy, France, or India. The only notable thing about Japanese students is their ability to excel in this. Their riots are triumphs of planned disorder

There is never a false move or a wasted motion in a Japanese student demonstration. Everything is done in a classical manner as though the demonstration had been arranged by a choreographer. Even sound effects are systematically rendered. It is not necessary to understand what the demonstration is about, only to understand that when the signal is given to start the procedure that it should be carried out to the letter. When it is all over, everybody disperses and goes home with a sense of work well done and an assignment carried out with dispatch and honor.

The whole thing, viewed objectively, is reminiscent of what was going on in Japan in 1852 when Commodore Matthew C. Perry arrived to win friendship for the United States. The coal-burning vessels of the U.S. Navy and the Yankees who manned them were unwelcome. Later, of course, the Japanese were to become the world's No. 1 naval power, which is something to wonder about in these early years of the nuclear era.

No Rustlers, Please!

Shades of the Old West again! A prowler has cut barbed wire fencing at a farm in Salineville. And there were cattle in the field near by.

Let's hope it was only a case of a little too much TV or a little too much something else and not an actual return to the days of the rustlers.

Diplomacy's Busy Season

The European air visits of Under Secretary of State George W. Ball are symbolic of the discussion and planning scheduled for the Western community this winter.

The United States will present its tariff proposals to the European Economic Community this week. The Western European Union Ministerial Council is meeting in Bonn. The North Atlantic Treaty Parliamentarians Conference is meeting in Paris. The NATO Council will meet in Paris Dec. 15.

The winter is certain to see a meeting between President Johnson and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson in Washington, following up the visit of Foreign Secretary Patrick Gordon Walker. President Johnson may decide to go abroador to send vice president-designate Hubert Humphrey.

In the midst of the row now going on among Republicans, I hope to offer in this piece a caution based on logic, reason and fair play

In the first place, it ill becomes Republicans who either refused to support Goldwater or actively worked against him to blame his defeat on the way he conducted his campaign.

Two fellows are in a fight. During the imbroglio a spectator reaches in and trips one of the combatants. Then after the opponent has won the fight, the man who interfered shouts that if the loser had fought better he would have won.

Those Republicans who failed to help or actively opposed Goldwater in this campaign should be the last to blame Goldwater for his loss.

IN POLITICS, as in many other human affairs, nothing succeeds like success. I know this well, because I have not only been close to many presidential campaigns but was a participant in one. In that one in 1932 which Roosevelt won, there were plenty of instances in the campaign in which the wrong thing was said and the right thing was omitted. But in the volume of praise that followed victory, nobody mentioned the errors, everybody praised the genius of the winner.

I have always since then followed the rule of refraining from performing a post-election autopsy on the loser. A lot of people right now who have had no experience in politics are popping up with "perfect" theories on how Goldwater might have won if he had said this or refrained from saying that.

That happened in 1960, and I replied by pointing out the factors which contributed to Nixon's defeat and for which he himself was blameless.

In this campaign Johnson made his mistakes, too. But he won, and all his deficiencies are NOW THAT it is over. Rockefeller is playing the old cracked record that we heard before the convention - all the old saws about the "mainstream" and "moderation." And while he chooses to remain irreconcilable, he is illogical enough to call for party unity.

In all fairness, it's necessary in appraising a defeat to take account of the odds and handi-rested in student demonstrations!

When we assay the results of this election, and we can't do it in a few days after the election, let us consider the handicaps as well as the failures. In common justice, let us not put all the blame on the one man at the head of the ticket.

Richard Nixon is one man who speaks from personal experience. He has since the election pointed out how hard it is on a candidate with fellow members of his own party dragging their feet. He is one man, perhaps the most important man to evaluate the future necessities of the Republican party.

Some Figures On Washington's Schools

"Resegregation" in public schools is still going on in the nation's capital. The October 1964 census figures just issued by the Washington school a u tho rities show that,

d e se gregation decision 1954, the in n umber of white students has declined David Lawrence from 43 per cent of the total school population to 12.4 per cent. The number of Negro students, on the other hand, has increased again, and now is 87.6 per cent of the total, as compared with 47 per cent in the 1953-54 school year. Many of the schools in Washington, nevertheless, still are virtually all-white or virtually all-Negro. There are only a few schools which can be said to be truly "integrated" in the sense that a substantial proportion of pupils of both races are in attendance at the same schools. Meanwhile, numerous white students have enrolled in private schools or have moved into public schools in Maryland or Virginia, where the Negro population is not as large.

IN TERMS of actual enrollment, there are only 17,673 white students in the public schools in Washington today, compared with 44.897 in October 1953. As for the Negro students, there are now 125,016 in the schools, in comparison with 58,936 in October 1953.

The amount of "resegregation" which has resulted is evident in the current highschool enrollment. Out of the city's eleven high schools, there are four with a substantial number of Negro and white children in each. In the others, the enrollment is divided as follows:

School	White	Negr
Cardozo	4	1.78
Dunbar	2	1.41

the schools were "desegregated" - Roosevelt High School had 634 white students and 518 Negro. Similarly, Eastern High had 510 white and 688 Negro students. McKinley high school had 521 white and 689 Negro students. The October 1964 figures show how these three big schools have lost virtually all of their white students.

The Supreme Court might, of course, take it upon itself to determine how an "attendance area" should be defined. This could mean that in the District of Columbia, for instance, school children would be authorized to cross state lines and claim the right to attend schools in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

'They forgot that plush buildings are secondary to good teachers, good textbooks, and the welfare of the children.' I agree with this completely, but new buildings are needed by the East Liverpool School Board in order to promote the welfare of the children who attend the high school. If one talks with any student of ELHS, he will find that the students, who will be responsible for a good deal of the cost themselves, will testify to the poor conditions of the buildings. It is a well - known fact at ELHS that the Central Building is dangerous in many ways. The third floor of the Central Building was condemned many years ago. The fire escapes are more of a menace second floor must move down fire escapes which are four stories high. If fire would begin in the Central Building, no student or teacher on the second floor would have the slimmest chance of escaping — the building would go up in an instant. In reference to the 'plush buildings', I do not think that it is too much to ask that we conduct classes in a building in which the plaster stays on the ceiling. It is not an unusual occurrence for plaster to fall to the floor during classes in the The high school building is

-Junior Editors Quiz on-Ant Cows

QUESTION: What are ant cows?

* * * ANSWER: Roger, in our picture, has discovered something fascinating-a tiny ant farm in full operation. There are more ants in the world than any other insect.

An ant "cow" is an aphid, a kind of soft-bodied little insect which lives by sucking the juices from plants. The aphid's body produces a sweet fluid called "honeydew," and this is the "milk" the ant is after. By stroking the aphid's body, the ant makes honeydew pour from tubes on the aphid's back; then the ant licks up the fluid. Ants carry their "cows" around and plant them in places where much honeydew will be produced; they also make ant farms near the home ant nest. Ants defend the aphids from enemies; sometimes they take their "cows" into the ant nest in winter to care for them. One kind of ant, after having kept aphids in the nest over the winter, clears dirt from the roots of corn plants and puts the aphids on the roots to make honeydew. Considerable damage can be done to corn plants in this way.

* * * FOR YOU TO DO: Turn over a few flat stones and you will probably find an ant colony under one. Look closely with a magnifying glass and see how furiously the ants work to carry their eggs off to some other place.

Billy Statzer of Farmville, Va., wins today's combined prize of Compton's Illustrated Science Dictionary plus $10 cash for this question. Mail yours on a postcard to Junior Editors in care of The Review and you may win the weekly prize of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia.
